Christmas celebration marks its 32nd year

By Stephen Dafoe

The sounds of the season will be ringing from St. Jean Baptiste Church this Thursday evening as Morinvillians come together for the 32nd Annual Community Christmas Celebration, an interdenominational Christmas gathering that organizers and participants are excited about.

"It's exciting in a large way because it's continued for 32 years," said committee member Leanne LaRoque. "We on the committee just feel it's outstanding that a community keeps a tradition like this alive for that many years. We have adults attending now that participated when they were students in school. Now they are bringing their kids to it."

LaRoque attributes the longevity of the annual Christmas tradition to maintaining the event's original intent of not being merely a Christmas concert where people come to watch people perform. Rather the magic of the event is its participatory nature.

"There's carol singing and readings, so people feel involved in it," she said. "They're not just watching their children or church groups perform. In that way, people feel involved and as though they're part of it. Truly, by the end of the celebration people are shaking hands with each other and wishing each other a Merry Christmas. They leave with a feeling the Christmas season has really begun. It leaves them with a good feeling, and I think that's what brings people back year after year."

LaRoque said the annual event is a great opportunity for the whole community to come together regardless of what church they belong to or if they belong to a church at all.

"It really gives people the opportunity to feel the Christmas spirit and the reason for the season with their friends and neighbours," she said.

Organizers are hoping new members of the community will also come out and participate in the evening celebration. "This is an evening where they can connect with other people in the community, feel a link to others, and see there are groups coming out sharing their musical talents," she said, adding she believed it will make newcomers truly feel a part of the community.

This year's celebration will bring together performers from the Morinville Minstrels Seniors Choir, École Georges P Vanier School, Notre Dame Elementary School and George H. Primeau School as well as St. Jean Baptiste Church, Morinville United Church and Morinville Christian Fellowship, each taking a role in the programming for the evening.

LaRoque said the Christmas celebration will run approximately 75 minutes in length, allowing people to get their children home and in bed so as not to affect school the next day.

Long history

The annual celebration was started in the late 1970s by John Unsworth, a former Morinville teacher, school board trustee, and Citizen of the Year. In its inaugural year, staff and students of École Georges P. Vanier School invited parents and the general public to a traditional Christmas concert in the school's gymnasium.

The response was so positive that Unger organized the first full Community Christmas Celebration the following year at St. Jean Baptiste Church, inviting other Morinville churches to participate in the event.

Over the next eight years the event evolved into what organizers say was the community's most anticipated annual event.

Unsworth moved to British Columbia in 1988 at which time the annual celebration was taken over by a small group of dedicated volunteers who wanted to see the event continue.

The Community Christmas Celebration takes place Dec. 16 at 7:30 p.m. Donations to the Knights of Columbus Christmas Hamper program are welcomed and encouraged.

MORINVILLE'S Monday Morning Opinion

Guest Column By Michael Cust

Thinking of elections ahead

Two elections loom, one federal, the other provincial. Since the operation of both the federal and provincial governments affect Morinvillians, it pays to consider both political scenes and the implications of your vote.

As writ of the former will drop first, let us commence with an analysis of it. The current Conservative government represents the autumnal stage of Preston Manning's Reform movement that began in the late 1980s. By the light of the original goals and principles of this movement, the current government's time in office has been at best disappointing and at worse an abject failure. Whereas Reform called for open and democratic government, scrapping most of the Firearms Act, selling crown assets, establishing a 'Triple-E' Senate, and fiscal accountability, we have a government that operates in secrecy, failed in its modest attempt to scrap the gun registry, overrides with will of the House with unelected Senators, and passes deficit budgets for the first time since Mulroney. And if abdicating all of their original principles wasn't bad enough, we have a Prime Minister from Calgary who favours Quebec and ignores the West. Just look at two recent government decisions: 1) spending money on a new arena for Quebec City and 2) choosing not to fund Edmonton's Expo bid. We created a movement in Reform to represent Western values and now we've ended up with Mulroney II.

So what should we do? Voting Liberal would be to put the party of social democratic urban Central Canada—the very opposite of what Westerners stand for—in power. And the NDP, though an interesting protest vote in parts of BC, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba has never really caught on across the West at the federal level. Sadly, until someone starts another regional Western party to represent our interests, it's unlikely we can do much but hold our noses and vote for the Tories.

This brings us to the provincial scene. With the arrival of the Wildrose, Albertans will enjoy something not seen in a generation: choice. They will now have two major parties to choose from instead of just one: the Alberta PCs. It appears the election will come down to the following question: have Steady Eddie and the PCs done a good enough job to deserve our continued support or should we give the Wildrose and their dynamic new leader Danielle Smith a chance at the helm? How you choose to vote will likely depend on your thoughts on how the health care system is operating, how well the Tories have stood up for Alberta against anti-oil activists, and whether or not you agree with the Tories decision to commence deficit financing.

Myself, I like Wildrose. I've been friends with Danielle for 10 years and I think it's time to allow some private alternatives in health care. But there are good arguments on the other side, so I know the choice is a tough one.

In our riding, we have an especially interesting race. Ken Kowalski, the longest serving MLA in the Legislature, will be taking on Link Byfield, social conservative activist and former publisher of the Alberta Report. It's tough to say who will win, but I suspect these two will provide compelling arguments for their respective parties that will make for entertaining debates.

Happy voting.

Michael Cust

Morinville has a brand new brand

By Stephen Dafoe

Survey results are in and Morinville's two logo finalists have been narrowed down to the one graphic symbol that will represent the community in Morinville's future branding and marketing efforts.

Dwayne Holland of Focus Design Group, the consulting firm hired by the Town last August to guide Morinville through its rebranding, presented the finalist to Morinville Town Council last Tuesday night, along with separate logos for the Morinville Community Cultural Centre and the Town's upcoming centennial celebrations.

The consulting firm had designed 13 contenders for Morinville's new branding logo after consultations with the community as to how it sees itself now and into the future. Those logos were narrowed down to four finalists that were presented to a number of stakeholder groups, including the Community advisory Committee, Town staff and council. The two finalists then became the focus of an online survey conducted in November.

Both the selected and rejected design sought to capture the essence of architectural elements found in St. Jean Baptiste Church, long an iconic image of the community.

The rejected logo (above) consisted of stylized interlocking Ms, said to be inspired by the architecture and stained glass of the church. The interlocked shapes were meant to convey the collaboration in the community. The interlocked letters also roughly took the form of a maple leaf.

The second logo (above) will now be Morinville's brand. It also uses a letter M – its shape inspired by the historic church's stained glass windows as well as the wrought-iron fence surrounding the heritage properties in the downtown core. As in the former design, the overlapping shapes are intended to represent community collaboration. Below the M is a stylized leaf intended to represent the community's trail system.

The new logo is accompanied by the tag or slogan "Growing together," suggested by Morinville Councillor Nicole Boutestein during the consultation process.

While the logo will be visual identification used on Town of Morinville signs, vehicles, letterhead and the soon-to-be-redesigned website, it is accompanied with a branding position and promise.

Morinville has earmarked an additional $200,000 in the draft 2011 budget to implement a communications and marketing plan, $75,000 of which is proposed to be spent on the redevelopment of the Town's website to make it more user-friendly.

The remainder will be used for other branding implementation attributes, including town entry signs, letterhead, business cards, vehicle logos, promotional materials, brochures, banners and other marketing and branding items for both the Town and the Community Cultural Centre.

The new brand is intended to receive an official launch Feb. 7 during a public event.

Logos and slogans Morinville could have used

With Morinville's new brand and slogan selected and ready for official launch in February, we thought it would be fun to take a lighter look at what Morinville could have had as an identifying brand.

You'll get used to the smell

Look! Another creative way to arrange the letter M

Hey! They said we'd never get a Hortons, too

1/ Is designed to blend Morinville's natural open spaces with the natural aroma of cooking meat emanating from the industrial park.

2/ This logo represents Morinville's desire to be economically diverse in its selection of places to eat. It also embodies the synergy between our dreams and aspirations and our desire to move forward with enthusiastic momentum.

2/ Represents Morinville's naturally open spaces with its naturally organic ability to be creative when it comes to arranging the first letter of the town name into various shapes and patterns.

Evening of Christmas favourites to aid food bank

By MMN Staff

The Morinville United Church will be hosting Morinville mezzo-soprano Krista Lessard and accompanist Shalee Konojacki this weekend for O Holy Night, an evening of Christmas Favourites. Dale Metcalfe, a past chair of the Morinville United Church board, said he was approached by Lessard to put on a charity concert and recommended that the Morinville Food Bank Society as a worthy local charity to help.

"Morinville United is always interested in doing anything that helps the needy in Morinville and so we're donating our space and some time to help her put the evening on," Metcalfe said, adding admission to the Lessard concert is free but cash donations will be collected for the food bank as well as non-perishable food items if people prefer.

The concert takes place Dec. 18 at 7:30 p.m. at the Morinville United Church, located at 9610 Morinville Drive. For more information on the event call 780-939-5888.

Some tips and thoughts from the moms at Tiny Tots Preschool

Tiny Tots Tidbits

The Holidays are here and with it the wonderful sights and sounds of the Christmas season! There's nothing more magical to a young child than the beautiful lights on the houses and decorating a Christmas tree. There's no better time than now to make fun memories with your kids to last a lifetime!

Here are some easy ideas to include your young one in the holiday preparations:

Reindeer Decorations:

- Trace hands and one foot onto brown paper or brown foam
- Cut them out and glue the hand shapes onto the foot shape to form a reindeer face and antlers.
- Add googly eyes
- A red nose (small pom poms)
- You can also add some sparkle glue to really make it shine!

Not only is it a fun craft to do on a snowy day, it makes great keepsake gifts for family, friends and teachers. You can also find everything you need to make this craft at home or at the dollar store.

Easy Kids' Baking: Snowman Poop

This is quick, easy and tasty! Ingredients:
Mini marshmallows and sprinkles

Simply put a handful of mini marshmallows and a pinch of sprinkles into a plastic zipper sandwich bag. Shake bag to mix ingredients. Use a sticker gift tag to label it Snowman Poop!

This makes a cute gift for anybody on your list... and its fun for both you and your little one to make!

Now that there's lots of snow on the ground, don't forget how fun it is to go outside and play! All kids, big and small, young and old love to build snowmen, have snowball fights and build snow forts, to go tobogganing, and make snow angels.

Best of all, the only equipment needed is warm clothes and fun!

Have a wonderful holiday season and enjoy all of the time spent with friends and family! Make sure to go for a family drive after dark to look at all of the beautiful Christmas lights up around town and see how excited your kids are to see the twinkly lights... get outside to play and then enjoy a warm cup of hot chocolate with their rosy cheeks and bright eyes... see the magic of the season through your children's eyes... it will amaze you!

From our families to yours... wishing you a magical holiday season full of wonder, lots of giggles, and many beautiful memories!
